2K hiring team, Tokyo

October 2026

Application: Associate Manager, Content Localization (Tokyo)

As a French native, I notice right away when a translation was rushed. As a producer at Bandai Namco, I learned why it happens: text that arrives late, strings without context, a schedule with no room for review. Helping a localization team avoid all three is what I would like to do as Associate Manager, Content Localization at 2K in Tokyo.

At Bandai Namco Entertainment Europe, as Global Associate Producer on Little Nightmares, localization was part of my daily work. I kept localization, QA, analytics, marketing and communications aligned with development on Little Nightmares III, the VR game and the mobile port, and reviewed milestone deliveries from external studios. I rebuilt project tracking in Jira, Confluence and SharePoint and automated a weekly report that used to take a full day.

French is my native language and English my working language, so I can judge French text quality and work with linguists and vendors in both. I also understand most spoken Japanese, which helps when working alongside teams in Tokyo; my Japanese reading and writing are still in progress.

On the people side, I coached the project leads of six game projects at the Nightmare Games incubator, and I teach Producing, Game Design and Level Design at Ynov Campus as a Visiting Lecturer. I have not worked as a linguist, but I know what a localization pipeline needs from production, and I trained as a programmer, so I pick up tools quickly.

I live in Tokyo and can start right away. My portfolio and CV are at sabri-mohamadi.fr. I would be glad to talk about how I can support your localization team.

Kind regards,

Sabri Mohamadi
