Application: Localization Project Manager (Tokyo)

French is my native language, English has been my working language for years, and since moving to Tokyo, Japanese is part of my everyday life. Localization is where those three meet, and it was part of my daily work as Global Associate Producer on Little Nightmares at Bandai Namco Entertainment Europe.

At Bandai Namco I worked with four external studios and with playtest and service vendors on three projects in parallel. I tracked schedules and deliveries, checked every milestone delivery against what had been agreed, and kept QA, localization, analytics, marketing and communications moving with development. When something slipped, my job was to spot the risk early, find its cause with the right team, and tell stakeholders before it became a problem.

I like making processes lighter. I rebuilt our project tracking in Jira, Confluence and SharePoint and automated a weekly report that used to take a full day. Before that, at Inov'Xper, I automated business processes for clients with Microsoft 365 and Power Automate and trained their teams, so client calls and clear documentation are familiar ground.

Training people is also part of my work: I teach Producing, Game Design and Level Design at Ynov Campus as a Visiting Lecturer, and I coached the project leads of six game projects at a games incubator. Purchase orders, translation memories and your internal tools would be new to me, and I learn tools fast; I trained as a programmer.

I live in Tokyo and can start right away. My CV is at sabri-mohamadi.fr. I would be glad to take the test and meet your team in Nishi-Shinjuku.

Kind regards,

Sabri Mohamadi
